10 ules of Packing

1. The Golden Rule: Take half of the clothes you were planning to bring and twice the money. I cannot stress how true this is.

   2. Take only what you can fit in a carry-on bag. We've all lost luggage before, and it's a pain. When it's 3 degrees in Poland and you don't have the right clothes because they are in your checked luggage, hearing "as soon as we find your bag, we'll send it to you" can be really discouraging... Also, a carry-on bag with wheels is worth its weight in gold because it makes it so easy to move around the airport.

   3. If you simply must check luggage, ask them to put a Fragile sticker on it, which helps to make sure your bags will not have things on top of them and will be first off the plane. Also, yours is not the only black suitcase, so put a sticker or red ribbon on it — anything that will help you pick it out in the crowd.

4. Mix and match. Bring three shirts and three "bottoms." That's nine outfits.

5. Books are wonderful. So are vinyl records. But save yourself the extra pounds and fill an electronic reading device with every book and country guide you need.

6. Don't be a diva. If you're the type who has to travel with your own hair dryer (and won't use the hotel's), then I might suggest a weekend at home instead of a trip to the Alps.

7. Jackets and sweaters take up a lot of space in your bag. Unless you're going to Russia in winter, take clothes you can wear one on top of another. It works just as well.

8. Stay away from jeans. This is huge and I should have moved it up to number 2. They absorb dirt (and odors), are bulky, and take days to air dry. Cotton and khaki are the way to go.

1. It is always best to travel light, so take ____.
   clothes that you can mix and match to create new outfits
   the travel guides and books about the place you are visiting what will fit in a bag you can carry onto a plane, train, or bus
2. Unless you are going to an extremely cold place, ____.
   take only two sweaters and one heavy jacket
   leave the heavy outer layers at home take clothes that you can wear one on top of the other
3. A useful piece of travel equipment to have is ____.
   an electronic reading device that can store guide books
   a small, light piece of luggage with wheels
   your own hair dryer
4. Avoid blue jeans because they ____.
   are hard to dry
