Lacrosse

Lacrosse is a very fast game that is played mostly outdoors. It is played with a heavy rubber ball and a stick with a pocket. The aim of the game is to catch, carry or throw the ball into the opponents' goal. There are two teams with 10 players. The players are not allowed to touch the ball with their hands. The game is divided into four periods. Each period lasts 15 minutes. There are men's and women's versions of the game. Men's lacrosse is a contact sport. That's why players wear protective clothing, such as gloves, helmets and arm paddings. It was originally played by the Native Americans. They believed that lacrosse made men stronger and better warriors. It was played before going to war. Sometimes there were 1000 players on each side of the field that could stretch from 1 to 15 miles. The game could last for days.
