Sharing a Room

Before starting university, I hadn't given more than a (0) B thought to what could go wrong sharing a room with another student. I had simply assumed that my roommate-to-be would be rather like me - at university to have fun but mainly to learn. Within a couple of weeks, I was (1) aware that my fun-loving Scottish roommate, Thomas, was at university to do a great deal of the former but very little of the (2)

Every evening, I would be tucked up in bed by midnight, exhausted from the day's activities. But the midnight (3) was precisely when Thomas' night began. First, a constant stream of people would start traipsing in and out of our room until a general consensus had been reached on how the night would best be (4) Next, preparations for the night would ensue; phone calls would be made, outfits chosen. If I was lucky, Thomas would be gone by 1:30am. But by 6:30am, he and two or three of his mates would be back, keen to (5) the night's activities. At which point, the smile I always endeavoured to plaster firmly on my face would be (6) dangerously thin.

Despite all this, Thomas and I remained (7) friends throughout university. Although I do confess that our friendship was (8) rather a lot by the fact that we both found new roommates before the first month was out!

1		B	too much	C	as well	D	all too
2		B	later	C	latter	D	other
3	A hour	B	moment	C	count
4		B	used	C	drawn	D	spent
5		B	measure	C	dissect	D	weigh
6	A wearing	B	fading	C	breaking
7	A strong	B	firm			D	secure
8	A brought about	B	helped along			D	loosened up

Part 2

For questions 9-16, read the text below and think of the word which best fits each space. Use only one word in each space. There is an example at the beginning (0). Write your answers IN CAPITAL LETTERS on the separate answer sheet.

Example: 0 O N E

Fake Rolex Watches

Rolex is (0) ONE of the most sought (9) brand names in the timepiece industry. (10) from the design and movement of a Rolex to its price screams quality. Thanks to the outrageous prestige of the Rolex brand, Rolex watches are (11) the world's most copied luxury items. In recent years, Rolex forgeries have become so good that the (12) of the best are now virtually identical to the real thing.

It (13) without saying that thrift motivates informed fake Rolex purchases. Most people simply don't have the money to purchase the genuine article. But what about those who are unwittingly duped into buying a fake Rolex? How can they avoid being scammed?

There is only one way to tell a high-quality Rolex knock-off (14) the real deal and that is to get an expert to open up the watch. At this point, most experts, most of the time, can spot a fake by looking at the watch's movement. But not always. Sometimes, even experts can have a hard time telling fake and genuine Rolexes (15) Thus, there really is only one fail-safe way for would-be Rolex owners to avoid being inadvertently caught (16) : purchase their watch from a reputable Rolex dealer.

Choose words from the box to complete the text:

8

far	of	be	with	everything	go	out
from		goes				along
before		best	anything		among
				after		apart

Part 3

For questions 17-24, read the text below. Use the word given in capitals at the end of some of the lines to form a word that fits in the space in the same line. There is an example at the beginning (0). Write your answers IN CAPITAL LETTERS on the separate answer sheet.

Example: 0 A D D I T I O N A L

Employee Sick Leave

The European Court of Justice has ruled that workers who become ill during their holidays have the right to take (0) ADDITIONAL paid time off later. ADD

The Luxembourg-based court stated that "the purpose of (17) TITLE to paid annual leave is to enable the worker to rest and enjoy a period of (18) RELAX and leisure. The purpose of sick leave is different. It is to enable a worker to recover from an (19) AIL that has caused him to be unfit for work." It concluded that it would be arbitrary and (20) CONTRADICT to the purpose of paid annual leave to deny workers holiday time in exchange for time spent sick.

Business groups in the UK warn that applying the courts' rules will be (21) DETRIMENT to the wider UK economy and say that the rulings (22) LINE the need for Britain's ministers to resist the court. But, unfortunately, while the UK has an opt-out on parts of the (23) DIRECT that the ruling relates to, it has no exemption on sick pay and holiday.

The UK government estimates that adopting the rules will cost British employers more than £100 million annually. The UK's Business Secretary described the court's rulings as "an unnecessary burden on businesses" and "completely (24) DEFEND during a time of economic strain".

You are going to read an extract from a novel. For questions 31-36, choose the answer (A, B, C or D) which you think fits best according to the text. Mark your answers on the separate answer sheet.

Underline or highlight parts of the text where you expect to find answers to each question. Write the question number in the margin if it helps you.

Behind the wheel of her new 2-litre Hyundai Coupé, Emma Boylan made her exit from the congested traffic lanes of Dublin's quays and headed for the town of Navan. Tourist promotions for the town used the tag line 'Only an Hour from Dublin'. Emma was hoping to better that. Leaving Phoenix Park via the Ashtown Gate, she allowed the car to reach 60mph. It was her first day to try out the car outside the city and she was looking forward to putting the silver machine through its paces. Trading in her old Volvo 360 GLT after many years of faithful service, she'd been seduced by the Hyundai's lines and curves, its leather upholstery and chrome dash. Sitting in the car in the showroom, she'd felt comfortable, at ease with its interior. Vinny, who had insisted on inspecting the car with her – believing himself to be something of an expert on the subject – expressed qualms. Was it not a bit too powerful for a woman driver, he offered.

That clinched it. She bought the car.

And now, on its first proper road test, it had come through with flying colours. According to the clock on the dash, the journey had taken fifty-four minutes exactly. Not bad.

It was rare enough for Emma Boylan to visit the Victorian building that housed her father's law practice. Her father did not encourage the habit, nor was it something she particularly enjoyed herself. But today she had decided to call on him unannounced. Even though he was busy talking on the telephone, he waved to her good-naturedly as she was shown into his office.

She sat in an uncomfortable armchair and waited for him to finish the call. Little had changed in her father's place of work over the years: flock wallpaper from skirting board to stuccoed ceiling, wine-coloured carpet on the floor, framed hunting scenes on the walls. Décor she considered oppressive. Muted noise from the traffic in the street filtered through windows that were top-heavy with elaborate pelmets. An array of photographs stood on top of a drinks cabinet: studies of her father the family man, posing with her and her mother at various events throughout their lives; her father the business man, happily smiling in the company of well-known movers and shakers from the world of finance and politics. Emma suspected that the display was more for the benefit of visitors than for the man sitting behind the desk. It never ceased to amuse her to note how accurately her father's office reflected his personality. She could not envisage working in such an environment, not that she would ever share such thoughts with her father.

Arthur Boylan finished his phone call, leaned forward in his swivel chair and smiled broadly. 'Emma, dear girl, what brings you down from the big smoke?'

'Had a little time on my hands... thought I'd drop by.'

'Emma,' he said, arching his head back, peering at her down the length of his finely sculptured aquiline nose, 'you're talking to your father now, remember? I know you never do anything without a reason. So, why are you here? What do you want?'

'Ah, Dad, you're being rotten.'

Her father got up from his chair, walked to a window facing Trimgate Street and stood there for a moment, his back to her. 'Huh, another coach-load of tourists taking pictures of our church,' he said, gesturing with his index finger at St Mary's Church across the street. 'They've discovered that Pierce Brosnan was an altar boy there when he was growing up here in the town. Strange to think of a Navan man playing James Bond, don't you think?' Emma remained silent. He turned to face her, adjusted the handkerchief sprouting over the breast pocket of his navy pinstripe suit. 'Come on, Emma,' he said, doing a passable impression of a barrister admonishing a witness, 'answer me one question: what are you looking for?'

31 What had made Emma finally decide which car to buy?

- B She reacted against Vinny's reservations.
- C She trusted the opinion of an expert on cars.
- D She was impressed by its power.

32 What do we learn about Emma's visits to her father at work?

- B She would never let him know in advance.
- C He was often too busy to see her.
- D They shared similar feelings about them.

33 What do we learn about the photographs of Emma's father?

- A They bore a very strong likeness to him.
- C He probably used them to impress people.
- D They obstructed the view from his desk.

34 How does Emma feel about her father's office?

- A Conditions there would not suit her.
- B She was disgusted because it was so dirty.
- C She secretly aspired to working in such a place.

35 Emma's father

- A knew there was a purpose to her visit.
- B knew she was in trouble.
- C was going to defend her in court.

36 From the extract as a whole, we can infer that the relationship between Emma and her father was

- A cold and hostile.
- B friendly but distant.
- C warm and loving.
