

Did you connect to any of the experiences in the film? How so?

How would you be an ally to a classmate who's having similar experiences to Chiron?

In the film, Juan was Chiron's main example of a "successful" man and he ends up following in his footsteps. Why is it important for children to see multiple examples of successful adults in their life?

In the opening scene of "Chiron" one student bullies Chiron in front of the entire class. What could the teacher or other students have done to de-escalate the situation?

If you could talk to a character from the film, who would it be and why?

What do you think happens next to Chiron (Black)? Explain your reasoning.

What are the different factors that influence a young person's ability to understand their own authentic identity?

Were you surprised by anything in the film? Why or why not?

Have you ever experienced some of the challenges (either external or internal) that Chiron faces in the film?