Quantifiers

Enough

a) After adjectives and adverbs.

Example: The bananas weren't ripe enough.

b) Before nouns as determiners.

Example: He hasn't got enough time.

c) It may be used alone as a pronoun.

Example: Would you like some wine?

No, thanks. I have enough.

Too many

Is always followed by an countable plural noun.

Example: I've eaten too many chocolates.

Too

Is used before adjectives or adverbs.

Examples: My jeans are too old.

He drives too fast.

It may be followed by an infinitive with to.

Example: The weather was too cold (for me) to swim.

Too much

Is always followed by an uncountable noun.

Example: He eats too much sugar.

1. Complete the sentences with too much or too many.

♦ I think we've bought _____ tickets for the show.

♦ They are making _____ noise.

♦ Don't you think there are _____ special effects in some films?

♦ There are _____ actors looking for work.

♦ The actress was wearing _____ make-up.

♦ There's _____ violence in films, isn't there?

2. Complete the sentences with too and enough:

◆ Mary isn't old enough to watch an 18.

Mary is too young to watch an 18.

◆ The stunt was too difficult for him to perform.

◆ _____

◆ The cinema tickets weren't cheap enough for us to buy.

◆ _____

◆ Did you like the film? – No, It wasn't interesting enough.

◆ _____

◆ The room was too cold for her to sit there.

◆ _____

◆ My cousin is too ugly to be a film star.

◆ _____

3. Answer the questions as the example. Use too, enough, too much or too many.

◆ Why didn't you buy the car? (expensive)

Because it was too expensive.

◆ Why didn't you see your friends? (people)

◆ _____

◆ Why couldn't you come to the party? (time)

◆ _____

◆ Why didn't you come to the cinema with us? (tired)

◆ _____

HOWDY, PARDNER!