While he was at the police station, he met a girl called Melanie, who had lost her dog. They agreed to meet that evening. She called him later and he invited her to the house. At about eight o'clock Melanie arrived, but there were about fifteen people with her and they had all brought lots to eat and drink. It was party time! Martin had great fun, but by the time everyone had left, the house was in a mess. He spent the rest of the weekend cleaning up and repairing the damages. Besides, his neighbours complained about the party, so he made cakes for each of them to apologize.
